Captain Peter Cordiner has been arrested at the instigation of sailor Arthur Wagle, on the charge of extreme brutality to the crew. It is alleged in the complaint that Captain Cordiner is a fiery, irate individual, who loves to assert his authority in the most expressive manner. It was nothing unusual for him to knock a man down just for sport.

Then I realized what I had done. Victor chairman. He decined, however, and congressman Thompson was selected.

February, and seven days later, it is claimed, the captain beat Charles Wilbur, for some technical offense and eight days following that beat and kicked the face of George Briggs. Another sailor further claimed that the sailors had to work without rest from 8 o'clock in the morning till midnight, and that for a week at a stretch they were forced to toil seventeen hours a In consequence of the inhuman treatment afforded by the captain, so the complaint continues, John Carney, an apprentice, jumped overboard and committed suicide about the 1st of the month. Captain Cordiner denies the story and says it is a blackmailing scheme on the part of the
